

PROJECT AND CONTRACT MANAGEMENT

Agile Project Management

5 day course

Classroom, online or in-house

Course overview

Agile methods were built for work where the requirement is discovered rather than specified, and applying them to work that is genuinely fixed produces ceremony without benefit. This course covers both the practice and the judgement of when it fits. Delegates work through iterative delivery, backlog definition and prioritisation, estimation and velocity, and the events and roles that structure a sprint. Substantial attention goes to the organisational conditions agile depends on, including a genuinely available product owner and a team allowed to decide how work is done. The course also covers hybrid approaches, since most organisations run agile delivery inside an annual budget and a fixed price contract.

What you will learn

- Judge whether a piece of work genuinely suits an iterative approach
- Define and prioritise a backlog against value and risk
- Estimate relatively and use velocity without turning it into a target
- Run the events and roles that structure iterative delivery
- Identify the organisational conditions the method depends on
- Operate a hybrid approach inside a fixed budget or contract
- Report progress to a governance body expecting a plan

Who should attend

- Project managers and delivery leads
- Product owners and business analysts
- Technology and change teams
- Sponsors governing iterative delivery
- PMO staff supporting mixed methods
