

TAX AND LEGAL TRAINING

Competition Law and Compliance

2 day course

Classroom, online or in-house

Course overview

Competition authorities across Africa impose penalties calculated on turnover and increasingly pursue individuals, and the conduct that attracts them is often ordinary commercial behaviour nobody flagged. This course covers staying clear of it. Delegates work through the prohibited horizontal practices including price fixing, market allocation and collusive tendering, and the vertical restraints that may or may not be lawful. Abuse of dominance is covered, including what dominance actually means. Merger control and the thresholds that trigger notification follow, along with the consequences of implementing before approval. Leniency and settlement are addressed. The course closes on building a compliance programme and on surviving a dawn raid.

What you will learn

- Identify prohibited horizontal practices in ordinary commercial conduct
- Assess vertical restraints for lawfulness
- Explain dominance and the conduct that abuses it
- Apply merger control thresholds and notification requirements
- Recognise the consequences of implementing a merger before approval
- Use leniency and settlement processes appropriately
- Build a compliance programme and respond correctly to a dawn raid

Who should attend

- Legal and compliance officers
