

CYBERSECURITY AND IT TRAINING

Cybersecurity for Everyone

2 day course

Classroom, online or in-house

Course overview

Most successful attacks begin with somebody outside the technology function doing something entirely reasonable. This course is for them. Delegates learn to recognise phishing and its more convincing variants, including messages that arrive from a colleague's genuine compromised account, why password reuse converts one breach into many, and how multi factor authentication is defeated in practice. Practical material covers safe handling of documents and data, working securely on personal devices and public networks, and what to do in the first ten minutes after realising you clicked something. The tone is deliberately practical and blame free, because an organisation whose staff hide mistakes cannot respond to them.

What you will learn

- Recognise phishing, including messages from genuine compromised accounts
- Explain why password reuse turns one breach into many
- Use multi factor authentication and recognise attempts to defeat it
- Handle documents and data safely inside and outside the organisation
- Work securely on personal devices and public networks
- Act correctly in the first ten minutes after a suspected mistake
- Report an incident without fear of blame

Who should attend

- All staff, in any function
- Managers responsible for a team's security behaviour
- Finance and payments staff targeted by fraud
- Executives and their assistants
- New joiners as part of induction
