

CYBERSECURITY AND IT TRAINING

Cybersecurity Governance and Incident Response

3 day course

Classroom, online or in-house

Course overview

A board is accountable for cyber risk it cannot assess directly, and the first time most boards test their arrangements is during an incident, at the point when decisions are expensive and information is thin. This course prepares both layers. Delegates work through governance structure, roles and the reporting that lets a board oversee something technical, risk appetite for cyber expressed in terms a board can use, and the assurance that tells them whether controls work. Incident response follows: the plan, the roles, and the decisions that belong to executives rather than to technical staff, including whether to disconnect, whether to pay, and when to notify. Regulatory and customer notification obligations are covered. Communication during an incident is addressed. The course closes on exercising the plan and on learning afterwards.
