

CYBERSECURITY AND IT TRAINING

Cybersecurity Governance and Risk Management

5 day course

Classroom, online or in-house

Course overview

A board is accountable for cyber risk it cannot assess directly, and the governance layer between the board and the technology exists to close that gap. This course builds it. Delegates work through roles and accountability from board to executive to operational team, policy architecture that people can actually follow, and the risk appetite statement that tells a security team what it may and may not accept. Reporting is covered in depth: what a board needs, at what frequency, and in what terms. Regulatory obligation, incident notification and third party governance complete the programme, along with the assurance mapping that shows who is testing what.

What you will learn

- Define accountability from board through executive to operational team
- Build a policy architecture people can follow
- Express cyber risk appetite in terms a security team can apply
- Report to a board in terms it can act on
- Meet regulatory obligations including incident notification
- Govern third party and supply chain security risk
- Map assurance so the board can see who tests what

Who should attend

- Chief information security officers and security managers
- Board members and executives with technology accountability
- Governance, risk and compliance professionals
- Internal audit leadership
- Regulators and supervisory staff
