

GOVERNANCE, RISK AND COMPLIANCE

ESG Reporting and Sustainability Disclosure for African Organisations

3 day course

Classroom, online or in-house

Course overview

Investors, lenders and regulators now ask for environmental, social and governance disclosure, and many organisations answer with a communications exercise that cannot survive the first question about how a number was produced. This course covers reporting that holds. Delegates work through the reporting standards and frameworks in use and which apply to a given organisation, materiality assessment and defending why a topic was included or left out, and the data behind each metric, its owner and its evidence. Environmental, social and governance metrics are worked through with their common pitfalls. Assurance readiness is covered, since disclosure is increasingly audited. Greenwashing risk is addressed directly, including the claims that attract regulatory attention. The course closes on the reporting cycle and on connecting disclosure to decisions actually taken.

What you will learn

- Identify which standards and frameworks apply to your organisation
- Conduct materiality assessment and defend inclusion decisions
- Establish data ownership and evidence behind each metric
- Prepare environmental, social and governance metrics correctly
- Get a disclosure ready for external assurance
- Avoid claims that create greenwashing and regulatory exposure
- Connect disclosure to decisions the organisation actually took

Who should attend

- Sustainability and ESG managers
- Finance and investor relations teams
- Company secretaries preparing integrated reports
- Internal auditors reviewing non financial disclosures
- Risk and compliance officers
