

TAX AND LEGAL TRAINING

Insurance Law and Regulation

3 day course

Classroom, online or in-house

Course overview

Insurance is a promise to pay in circumstances defined by a document nobody reads until the loss has happened, and most disputes turn on disclosure, exclusions or a condition breached long before the claim. This course covers that ground. Delegates work through the formation of an insurance contract, insurable interest and utmost good faith, and the disclosure duty and its consequences. Policy interpretation is covered, including exclusions, warranties and conditions precedent. Claims handling and repudiation follow, along with the grounds that will and will not hold. Intermediaries, their duties and their liability are addressed. Regulation of insurers and conduct requirements are covered. The course closes on dispute resolution and the ombud process.

What you will learn

- Explain insurance contract formation, insurable interest and good faith
- Apply the disclosure duty and the consequences of breaching it
- Interpret exclusions, warranties and conditions precedent
- Handle a claim and assess whether repudiation is defensible
- Describe intermediary duties and where liability falls
- Meet insurer conduct and regulatory requirements
- Use the ombud and dispute resolution routes

Who should attend

- Insurance underwriters, claims and compliance staff
- Brokers and intermediaries
- Legal counsel handling insurance matters
