

QUALITY, ISO STANDARDS AND AUDITING

Integrated Management Systems: ISO 9001, ISO 14001 and ISO 45001

5 day course

Classroom, online or in-house

Course overview

Many organisations run three parallel manuals, three audit calendars and three management reviews for quality, environment and safety, and the duplication breeds contradiction. Built on the common high level clause structure shared by ISO 9001, ISO 14001 and ISO 45001, this programme shows how to merge them into one system. Delegates map the shared clauses, then build a single context analysis, a combined register of risks, aspects and hazards, a unified register of legal obligations, merged document control and one internal audit schedule. Worker consultation, emergency preparedness and life cycle thinking are placed where each belongs without diluting the others. The sequence ends on a single management review and an integration roadmap for an existing site. Delegates leave able to design and govern an integrated system that satisfies all three standards with less paperwork.

What you will learn

- Map the shared clause structure of ISO 9001, ISO 14001 and ISO 45001
- Design a single context analysis and interested parties register
- Combine risks, environmental aspects and hazards in one register
- Build a unified register of legal and other obligations
- Merge document control, records and internal audit into one scheme
- Place requirements unique to each standard without weakening them
- Plan an integration roadmap for a site with separate existing systems
- Run one management review that covers all three disciplines

Who should attend

- SHEQ managers
