

PROCUREMENT AND MATERIALS MANAGEMENT

Procurement Integrity, Ethics and Anti Corruption

3 day course

Classroom, online or in-house

Course overview

Procurement is where an organisation's money meets people who want it, which makes it the function most exposed to corruption and the one where a single relationship can cost more than a year of savings. This course covers the exposure. Delegates work through the schemes that actually occur, collusive bidding, bid rigging, kickbacks, conflicts of interest and the specification written around one supplier, and the conditions in a process that make each possible. Gifts, hospitality and the point at which they stop being courtesy are addressed directly. Declaration and management of conflicts follow. Detection through data and pattern analysis is covered. Reporting, protection for the person who reports, and investigation are addressed. The course closes on designing a process where these schemes are hard to run.

What you will learn

- Recognise collusive bidding, bid rigging and kickback schemes
- Identify a specification written around one supplier
- Judge when gifts and hospitality stop being courtesy
- Declare and manage conflicts of interest properly
- Detect irregularity through data and pattern analysis
- Report safely and support an investigation
- Design a process in which these schemes are hard to run

Who should attend

- Procurement, contracts and supply chain officers
- Internal auditors, risk and compliance officers
- Ethics officers and integrity committee members
